This lesson considers the Bible's last words (Revelation 22:6-21). Some of these words are John's, some are the angel's, and some are the direct words of Jesus himself.

This passage may be divided into three parts:

1. A conversation between the angel and John with an endorsement interjected by Jesus (Rev 22:6-11).
2. A final message from Jesus Christ himself (Rev 22:12-17).

Some consider the passage to be somewhat disjointed, and not so neat as I have made it. Possibly I am mistaken in what words I have attributed to John, the angel, or Jesus. In any case, they are all speaking in harmony. John and the angel say only what Jesus gives them to say. All the words are from Christ really, regardless of who is actually speaking.
